PREFACE TO FOURTH EDITION.

THE success attending the Three previous Editions of this Work has induced the Compilers to reproduce it in a greatly enlarged form.

The First Edition contained about 1,000 Examples.

The present Volume consists of about 70,000, many of which are the outcome of actual experience.

A large proportion of the presumed Errors which Telegraph Companies are called upon to correct may be explained by a reference to these pages, and delay, and possible loss, be thus avoided.

The previous Edition included a Chapter entitled "Some Observations upon the Sources of Errors in Practical Telegraphy," which we are assured has been of considerable service both to Code Compilers and the Mercantile Community. Some of these observations are therefore republished in the present Work.

It is hoped that with the object of facilitating the Correct Transmission of Telegrams, Merchants will eliminate from their Codes those Words Telegraphically liable to Error in Transmission, or be so far on their guard as to refer to this Work as a Guide to the Selection of Words to supply the place of others which are found to necessitate frequent inquiries and repetitions.

SOME OBSERVATIONS UPON THE SOURCES OF ERRORS IN PRACTICAL TELEGRAPHY.

For two years a record was kept by a leading Telegraph Company of each word which had been the cause of error, and for which a repetition had been demanded, and a long list of such words was published.

Of these it was found that close upon 25 per cent. were identical in their telegraphic symbols with a similar number of entirely different words. For example, "access" becomes "actress," by the LENGTHENING OF A SPACE in the signals required to express the letters:—

a	c	c	e	s	s
—	—	—	—	—	—
a	c	t	r	e	s
—	—	—	—	—	—

"Baneful" becomes "dutiful" as simply.

b	a	n	e	f	u	l
—	—	—	—	—	—	—
d	u	t	i	f	u	l
—	—	—	—	—	—	—

and so on.

THE LOSS OF A SIGNAL is another fruitful source of error. Example:—

r	e	b	u	k	e	d
—	—	—	—	—	—	—
r	e	b	u	t	t	d

Here the loss of a dot forms an entirely different word, and to this cause was attributable nearly one-half of the list in question.

SIMILARITY OF SOUND AND INDISTINCT WRITING are also sources of numerous errors. When one clerk is writing to the dictation of another who is receiving a telegram, such words as "accept" sound like "except," "counsel" like "council," "cereal" "serial," "century" "sentry," "cemetery" "symmetry," "edition" "addition," "eight" "right," "impress" "empress," and so on.

In writing telegrams the public display an alarming amount of carelessness, which is a source of great trouble and annoyance to operators. Such words as "clearer" and "dearer," "changing" and "charging," "capture" and "captive," "doubled" and "doubtled," "swelling" and "smelling," "twenty" and "seventy," are illustrations of words being liable to change unless written with care and consideration for the fact that each letter has to be deciphered by another individual to whom the writing is not familiar, and sent to the other end of the earth to produce some important result.

All the Morse symbols used to express the letters of the alphabet, excepting "e" and "t," can, by a mere prolongation of a space, express two or more letters.

Thus "a —" becomes "e - t —;" "j — — —" becomes "e - o — — —" or "a — — m — —" and so on.

In rapid telegraphy all the NUMERALS MAY BECOME LETTERS; so much so, that in code telegrams partly composed of groups of figures and code words, the signals for "1,290" might appear to the operator as "aunt," "598" as "end," "3,590" as "vent," and so on in numerous cases. This is a clear danger to the correct transmission of telegrams comprised of code words mixed with groups of figures.

The difficulties of accurate telegraphic transmission have further been materially increased by the great ingenuity which has been exercised to produce methods of expressing every kind of commercial, political, and social want in secret language, or by numerals or letters, and, again, by combinations of syllables of one or more languages. The fact is, that secret letter telegrams require for transmission much more time than is necessary for transmitting ordinary code language. Besides, the principle admits of manufacturing words by placing a vowel here and there amongst consonants, such, for example, as a b e d l g. By the use of two vowels, "e" and "u," this can be made the pronounceable word, "abcedlug;" and as in writing the letter "l" might easily appear "b" or "t," the letter "e" be mistaken for "i," and "e" for "u," we might have "alcidlug," "abcedbug," or "alcidlug;" and so on, without any sense, or dictionary, or experience to guide us—nothing but uncertainty and a necessity for repetitions.

If this reasoning be applied to proper names and names of places in the eight languages sanctioned by the International Telegraph Conference, held in London in 1879, the reader will understand the objection which induced the Delegates, after much consideration, to reject them altogether. Thousands of words in each language can be created by ringing changes with vowels and consonants, and alleging that such words are proper names.

This practice had commenced, and was increasing. Words which were called proper names made discrimination useless. So that language had either to be defined with some strictness, or a letter tariff pure and simple had to be adopted. For this the Delegates were not prepared, and the public would have been a good deal startled at the tariff which telegraph administrations must have demanded for an experiment which might have been disastrous to their revenues.

It will be useful to state the leading principles which favour the expansion of telegraphy. They are well established, and any code which does not deal equitably between the Public and the Telegraph Administrations cannot be enduring or satisfactory. It will have all the faults of a one-sided bargain or agreement. It will be resented, and lead to change of rules as soon as the grievance is fully realised.

FIRST.—Telegraphy must be reliable.—Merchants will hesitate to spend money upon a telegram if its arrival or time of receiving a reply are altogether uncertain. On the other hand, if within a given number of hours a reply can be relied upon, the telegraph must be resorted to in an ever-increasing number of exigencies.

SECOND.—Accuracy.—This is certainly next in importance, and the system, be it what it may, which shall ensure the greatest amount of accuracy must soon commend itself to every signatory of the Telegraph Convention, and every one practically engaged in the system of telegraphy.

THIRD.—Speed.—Although of less consequence than either of the foregoing, yet its value in promoting the growth of telegraphy is undoubted. All Bourse transactions depend greatly upon it, and numerous inquiries in relation to business are encouraged if an answer can be relied upon within a very short time.

Over all the world we have arrived at marvellous perfection in the first and third of these principles. The mechanical and scientific contrivances for speed are almost perfect. The further practical improvements in this particular depend more upon the telegraph language adopted by merchants than upon any of the new mechanical and scientific appliances which are continually pressed upon our attention.

For reasons other than the similarity of signals, and into which it is needless to enter, figures may be, and often are, transformed as follows:—

It will thus be seen that the transformation of a complete group of figures into an intelligible word is a by no means impossible matter, much as it might mystify a stranger to the telegraphic symbols employed. The following examples will illustrate the liability to error of messages composed in part of groups of figures and code words.

THE "TELEGRAPH CONVENTION" CODE

(COPYRIGHT.)

Compiled by a Staff of the most Experienced Telegraphists in the World.

IT is understood that the principle of issuing such a Code as the "TELEGRAPH CONVENTION" CODE was approved by a majority in Committee of the Berlin Telegraph Conference, but was not confirmed in full Conference, the principal objection to it being the expense and labour of preparation.

The cost and work of compilation have now been incurred by private enterprise, and it is believed that the extreme attention which has been given to the selection of words in the Eight Languages authorised by the International Telegraph Convention renders this Code TELEGRAPHICALLY superior to any hitherto offered to the Public.

The "TELEGRAPH CONVENTION" CODE has been approved by the leading Cable Companies, as meeting a want in the interest of the Telegraphing Public.

No expense has been spared, and the greatest possible care taken to eliminate—

- (1st) All words which are IDENTICAL in Telegraphic Signals.
- (2nd) Words varied by only one or two Telegraphic Signals.
- (3rd) Words liable to error from similarity in sound or writing.

Only about one-seventh of the Words examined have been found suitable for this Code.

PRICE per Pair.
